DAILY WEATHER MAP

Herald thinks corn sentiment is more bearish than for many weeks, with many traders declaring December and May corn too high.

Tribune thinks foreign wheat situation outside the well-supplied English situation is unchanged. Canada can export oats on somewhat cheaper basis than United States right now. Beeves, $7.40@11.00; stockers, $6.40 The Examiner believes England is well @8.25; cows, $4.00@9.75; Texans, supplied with wheat. War news suggests flour buyers will become far less eager and this may show up in a less end rush to buy some cash wheat. The past week brought the sixth week of war excitement in the markets. Probably owing to the battle trend, the sharp extended bulges were notably 8:30@9.40, good 8.80@9.35, rough 8.10 absent. Arguing from this, we have a clear opinion that an Austrian collapse w'll mean lower prices for the grains and provisions. Any news that tends to force a short war will not lift
